Deck Series

Internet Archive Edition

Photographed on an ordinary deck at night, this series captures beams, starbursts, and orbs of light that emerge when the familiar is seen with attention. The intent is not to explain, but to witness—leaving the sequence intact so viewers can see what was seen.

Some frames show sharp flares, others a softer glow or the round forms often called orbs. Together they become a record of night encounters with light—sometimes subtle, sometimes striking, always present.

Series Introduction

The following sequence presents the Deck Series as captured. Images are placed one to a page, without commentary, so that the light phenomena can be observed directly. Repetition is part of the record—a reminder that light often insists on being seen more than once.
